Slow Food Sunday

Join us for our community series to share, learn about, and celebrate food! Slow Food is an int'l organization that places emphasis on food literacy and our social relationship with food – how it's produced, its nutritional characteristics, and respect for its seasonal, local sourcing, and cultural aspects.

Slow Food Sunday – a program led by the Slow Food Club of Bastyr University and Slow Food members of Seattle's eastside – is a quarterly gathering held on a Sunday afternoon. The event involves socializing, sharing a meal with others, and experiencing a presentation of topics related to the Slow Food movement. Opportunities also are available to participate in the preparation of the meal under the guidance of the lead chef or home cook from our community.

For the October gathering, we're presenting a special program that ties together adventure travel and food experiences. The Recipe Hunters travel the world recording the stories behind traditional recipes that are handed down from generation to generation. We'll have Anthony Morano & Leila Elamine with us to share a sampling of unique dishes, exciting stories, and captivating documentary footage collected during their recent adventures in the Mediterranean and Mexico. Our event also is a fundraiser for the Culinary Heritage Corporation founded by Anthony & Leila – an entity with a mission to promote cultural pluralism through food. Visit our Web site for menu details and registration information.

Social time begins at 1:30p and the meal starts at 2p. Participants are encouraged to bring a preferred drink such as beer, wine, or other light beverage. Dessert contributions to share also are appreciated.

Note: Due to the fundraising aspect of this event, special pricing applies

Admission: Adults $25, Students $15, Children (under 12) $5
